Headline: The Copper Art of Amber Jones at the Morris Graves Museum of Art

The Copper Art of Amber Jones will be featured at the Morris Graves Museum of Art Gift Shop through the end of December. These beautiful chimes and wall hangings make ideal and affordable gifts for the holidays

For the last twelve years Amber Jones has been working with metal, first creating one-of-a-kind jewelry, and more recently using copper and steel to make wonderful objects for the home and garden. She also paints murals and portraits. The work she has completed includes murals in a jungle hospital in Peru, drywall sculpting in custom mansions in Lake Tahoe, dental office exam room ceiling murals on the California coast and two-story tree murals in Washington. Her copper art and jewelry can be found in as many as 60 fine stores and galleries on the West Coast and elsewhere, even Fiji!

“As far back as I can remember, I have been creating, drawing, painting, and making jewelry, greeting cards and gifts for family and friends. As an only child for the majority of my childhood, I learned to entertain myself by making things with my hands. I still find it entertaining to create beautiful objects and images that delight the senses as well as the mind. Art is the perfect way to express the emotions felt when experiencing a beautiful moment, like when you’re glad to be alive, or the joy you feel from watching a colorful sunset high atop a mountain, or the mystery of a starry, full moon lit night. Life is full of beautiful moments; art can capture them and remind the viewer that beauty and joy is all around us if we take the time to look.”

“As a wife and a working mother of an active little girl, it is sometimes hard to find time to be creative, but I find the most inspiration from our outdoor activities. We love to go exploring in the mountains, kayaking on quiet waters, bicycling in the woods, camping in the wilds, or making sandcastles on the beach in the sun. It is from these moments in nature that I get my most creative inspirations, and get my ‘batteries’ recharged to handle whatever life throws my way.”

“I thoroughly enjoy my work and relish the challenges each project presents, for sometimes a challenge forces your creativity to produce something better than you first imagined.”

The Museum Gift Shop is an ideal place to shop for your holiday gifts. The Morris Graves Museum of Art is located at 636 F Street, in Eureka, and is open Wednesday through Friday from 12-5pm.
